ART AND THE PIG.

It seems to be putting a tremendous value on the great American hog when this country says to France: 'You won't let in our pigs. Very well. We won't let

As a retaliatory measure this cannot be considered a wondrous success, but as a piece of National stultification it hardly falls short of absolute fatuity. The sufferers from the imposition of a duty on Art are the people who would profit by it most-that is, those who constitute the great bulk of the American people, persons moderately well circumstanced, with a common education and a desire for improvement, The American millionaire will buy his MILLETS. COBOTS, HOUSEAUS even if he does have to pay his country for the privilege of doing so. But men who would buy a great work of art for exhibition purposes and which would reach the population more than all the private galleries in the country will balk at a high tariff on the picture. Hence the educational advantage of such a work is lost.

The Conference Committee has a splendid chance to show its patriotism and it brains by restoring Art, so far as it can, to the free list. Everybody of sense hopes that the Committee will do this.

SHOT VERSUS PLATEL

The experiments made at the naval proving ground at Annapolis yesterday to test the armor plate to be used on the boats of our navy were very satisfactory. They demonstrated the superiority of these steel plates over those which are employed in the English Navy.

Projectiles from a six-mch gun pene trated the British armor, and four of these shots destroyed the target. This is certainly a matter of pride to Americana Her navy is England's proud boast, and ours has been till recently something. which we were only too giad to have un-

But if the six-inch gun can drive a pro jectile through the best armor plate which Britain can cover her cruisers with, while the plate intended for our boats successfully withstands the same projec tile. It looks as if the American Navy were looking up.

Hurrah for such progress as this!

DION BOUCICAULT.

The death of Dion Boucicault, playwright and actor is announced this morning. It is in his professional capacity alone that the deceased need be considered He wrote nearly four hundred plays, and many of them have been very successful. That supreme quality in a play, action is the one which is most prominent in Bocct-CAULT'S productions.

That he was largely an adapter is not to his discredit since he did not disclaim the fact, and sufficiently observed the "morality of inverted commas." As Mr. Boy-CICAULT remarked, SHARESPRARE did the

As an actor he was not great, but exhibited much ability. His life was a long one and certainly productive. He has contributed considerably to the amusement of people, surely enough to entitle him to some regard.

The fact that no public provision is made to prepare grammar-school gradpates for entrance to the highest grade of colleges limits the choice of the beneficiaries of the fund for the present to the College of the City of New York, which has a preparatory course of one year, and an excellent curriculium for the regular college course.

It was announced to the first class that the assistance would be continued in any of the higher colleges as soon as they could prepare themselves for entrance thereto.

A new store was about to open. That is not an extraordinary occurrence, but this store was what Mr. Dick Swiveller's little "Marchioness" would call "a regular wouncr." It was the new clothing store of the Mann Brothers, Grand and Orchard attreets.

The building is spick span new, a finst three-story and beaement atrusture of relieve proseed brick and Indiana stone, standing where a half dozen rickety, tumbledown in tile building sused to may the beauty of this great retail street.

The new building has a frontage on Grand street of 100 toet, and a like frontage on Orchard street. It has on each front four plates glass windows, in by 15 feet in size, and entrances 35 feet screes.

Inside everything was brand-new. More than $250,000 worth of new goods were heaped up lavishly upon new table counters of quartered oak, and a pretty cashier was perched behind a magnificent deak of quartered oak. The twinture was by Shastey and cost $10,000.
